

Ways you can get involved with Greenpeace

- Subscribe to the climate change blog and get the latest letters to the editor calls (its fun and a great feeling when your letter gets published) here.
- Visiting your MPs as part of the national Big Switch campaign. The environment movement has sent a survey to every MP in Australia to find out where they stand on real climate change solutions. We've published their response and ranked their climate credentials so everyone can see where they stand. Now we are encouraging people to engage with the MPs and, if they aren't already, tell them to get serious about climate change. Having a group of people doing that would be really powerful. You could also write letters to local papers about your MPs if you do or don't get a good response from them and you can encourage other people to put the heat on their MPs. Have a look at the site here.
- Subscribe to the Switched On newsletter to get updates on clean energy, climate justice and actions you can take on climate change here.
- Get your university campus to go GE-free. Find out why and download the True Food Guide here and here.
